OPTIONAL PRACTICAL TRAINING

Definition

Practical training is an opportunity for hands-on experience related to one’s field of study. Optional practical training (OPT) may be authorized by the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) during the following times:

1. during your annual vacation and at other times when school is not in session, if you are currently enrolled, are eligible for registration and intend to register for the next semester;
2. while school is in session (not to exceed more than 20 hours per week);
3. after completion of all course requirements for the degree, excluding the thesis or dissertation;
4. after completion of degree requirements.

You may be eligible for optional practical training in your field of study if you have been maintaining F-1 status at the time of the request and you have been a full-time student for one academic year. This also includes students who, during their course of study were enrolled in a study abroad program, provided they were enrolled for one full academic term in the U.S. prior to studying abroad.

You may be authorized for up to twelve months of optional practical training. Additionally, you may become eligible for another twelve months of practical training when you change to a higher educational level.

Part-time optional practical training, 20 hours per week or less, will be deducted from the available twelve month period at one-half the full-time rate. (i.e. six months of part-time practical training will equal three months deducted from the total twelve month period.)

It is not necessary to have an offer of employment in order to apply for optional practical training. USCIS currently has no formal provision for revoking practical training authorization once it has been approved.

During post-completion OPT, F-1 status is dependent upon employment. Students may not accrue an aggregate of more than 90 days of unemployment during any post-completion OPT carried out under the initial post-completion authorization.
